Edith Willoughby For The Overbrook School For The Blind : Overbrook School for the Blind (PA) (Campus History Series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Overbrook School for the Blind (PA) (Campus History Series):

Since 1832, Overbrook School for the Blind has been a leader in providing educational programs to children and young people who are blind and visually impaired. Julius Friedlander, the school's founder, and other early leaders worked hard to inform people about the educational needs of the children. Their efforts resulted in providing reading material for the blind and Overbrook's production of the first embossed book in America, the Gospel of Mark, and the publication of the first magazine for the blind, Lux en Tenebrae. Offering students access to all educational opportunities continues to be the school's main goal, and in the early 1990s, Overbrook pioneered the development of a school wide technology initiative that provided students with the ability to access the curriculum, communicate, and be successful in employment. Through rare photographs and documents, Overbrook School for the Blind offers a glimpse at the school's role in reaching out to people who are blind and it showcases how Overbrook has helped thousands of students to achieve independence, self-confidence, and the skills to experience active and fulfilling lives.

About the Author Edith Willoughby, former librarian and now the archivist at Overbrook School for the Blind, compiled this history by reviewing the extensive archives of the school and researching the backgrounds of the early founders.
