then and there. By broadening your perspective and understanding of slavery you can understand the bigger picture as it relates to our history and where we are now. 10 of 12 people found the following review helpful. What "slavery" was really like, and its not what you were told in school! By GloriaWow! This book is an eye-opener! This book was written by Nehemiah Adams in the 1850's. He was a clergy from the North who traveled to the South, and tells what he saw. He was basically shocked and surprised to see the "slaves" were happy, well-dressed, and treated with dignity. Not at all like he thought, and not at all like is being taught in the politically correct version of history. History is supposed to be facts, not fiction or fantasy. And while I'm on the subject, did you know that Uncle Tom's Cabin was strictly a work of fiction? Harriett Beecher Stowe made it up. And, she hadn't even been to the South to know what it was like! Unfortunately, there was no disclaimer written in her book to say this, so people actually believed (and still do believe, unfortunately) what she said and took it as truth!!! So, if you want to find out for yourself what "slavery" was like in the South (which was really servitude and not slavery), read this eye-witness account and find out. It's time for the truth to be told! 2 of 8 people found the following review helpful. Through rose colored glasses... By CustomerIn regard to Gloria's comment about Harriet Beecher Stowe's book, Uncle Tom's Cabin being "Made up" I would refer you to her book "A Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin." The entire book is the background information that Harriet based her book on. It is not an easy read, as it is mentioned as documentation for the other book. It also includes mention of the Abolitionist Delia Webster, Rev. Calvin Fairbanks and their imprisonment for taking the family of escaped slaves Mr. Lewis Hayden, his wife and son, to freedom from Kentucky to Ohio in 1854. Delia Webster went to speaking engagements with Mr. Adams and is mentioned numerous times in newspaper records.
