Glenn Dedmond : Southern Bronze before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Southern Bronze:

5 of 8 people found the following review helpful. GREAT BOOK!By Dellas T. BergholmOne of the reasons I know that the books from Glen Dedmond are excellent is because I am fortunate enough to know the man. I'm in an organization that he helped to rebuild. I was the editor of the newsletter and had been the first one to read his submissions. Mr. Dedmond researches his research so you know that what he writes will be correct! Many authors of history will just write the popular word in the sense of thier subject, in a way, making a fool of our brains in thier "teaching" words. I have learned a lot from Mr. Dedmond, not only from his books, but also from being his freind. Everyone who has enjoyed his books might want to know that his keen knowledge of the period of the war between the states contain many aspects of the period. I might add that his wife Donna has also been a mentor to many women. I'm sad to say that we have not been in touch for quite a few years, but that's neither here nor there. I look forward very much to read what he has written next. Thank you, Dellas Bergholm.

Southern Bronze is an in-depth history of Garden's (S.C.) Battery during the Civil War. The unit, from Sumter, South Carolina, took part in all the major campaigns of the Army of Northern Virginia. They were the last off the field at Shapsburg, farthest to advance at Gettysburg, fought one of the last engagements of the war on April 8, 1865, and was one of the largest artillery companies to lay down their arms at Appomattox.

About the Author Glenn Dedmond is a history teacher and member of a number of historic and patriotic organizations, serving as Commander of the Palmetto Battalion Light Artillery and Ferguson's Artillery Company. He lives in Johnston, South Carolina.
