Rafael A Permuy López : Spanish Republican Aces (Aircraft of the Aces) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Spanish Republican Aces (Aircraft of the Aces):

By Alec Marsh More thqn most osprey Aces books, this one gives biographies of each ace, but one learns less about the air war in Spain from the repoublican side. One needs to supplement this text with the other ospreys about the Spanish Civil war, ACES OF THE CONDOR LEGION and C.R. 32 Aces to get the full picture of airpower in this terrible conflict. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A good reference book By Mark Turner A good reference book, like most Osprey titles. It leads you to research for more in-depth information. Well worth it. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By John William Lewis Excellent

At the start of the civil war, most young fighter officers joined the rebels (Nationalists). It was the high ranking officers, grupo or escuadrilla commanders, and the NCOs, sergeants and corporals who remained loyal to the government. The obsolete Nieuport Ni.52s and the three rare Hawker Furies were soon outpaced by the opposing more modern Fiat CR.32s and Heinkel He 51s. However, at this early stage of the war, there were several Republican airmen who became aces and famous in the process, despite the small numbers of enemy aircraft shot down. Subsequently, a relative handful ex-French Dewoitine D.372 and Loire Nieuport 46 fighters flown by foreign mercenaries and Spanish pilots managed to turn the aerial balance in favour of the Republicans. With the arrival of the Soviet Polikarpov I-15 Chato and I-16 Mosca fighters, the Republicans consolidated this superiority, but most of the fighter pilots flying these modern types were Soviet. Some Spaniards started to fly Chatos from February 1937 with the establishment of the first two Spanish I-15 escuadrillas, commanded by capitanes García Lacalle and Alonso Santamaría respectively. They made their debut in the battles of the Jarama and Guadalajara. In the north, by the spring and summer of 1937 most Chato pilots were now Spanish. During the battle of Brunete, in July 1937, the first pilots trained in the USSR to fly the fast I-16 Mosca monoplanes arrived in Spain, and they quickly began to take a toll of enemy aircraft. Widely speaking, the Republican military aviation did not keep an exhaustive record of individual shooting claims. However, sufficient documentation exists to make a reasonable assumption as to which pilots fall into the ace category. This volume details the exploits of those pilots, complimenting previous works in the Osprey Aircraft of the Aces series on Nationalist CR.32 Aces and Polikarpov I-15, I-16 and I-152 Aces.

“The Republican side of this aerial conflict is well researched and told by Rafael A. Permué López, the deputy director of the magazine Ares Enalyus [Military History]. As with other titles in Osprey's 'Aircraft of the Aces' series, Spanish Republican Aces is nicely illustrated and made more complete by Julio López Caeiro's 24 color profiles. It is recommended.” ?P.K., Over the Front (Winter 2012)“Spanish Republican Aces perfectly complements OSPREY's Aces of the Legion Condor (Aces 99) and Fiat CR.32 Aces of the Spanish Civil War (Aces 94) ... Robustly recommended.” ?David L. Veres, www.cybermodeler.com“...a fascinating look into a subject for which there has been little written. A book that I know you will find as interesting a read as did I.” ?Scott Van Aken, *Modeling Madness*About the AuthorRafael A Permué López, a Reserve Artillery Major, is a member of the Spanish Instituto de Historia y Cultura Aeronáutica and a journalist with a long career in newspapers and military history magazines.
