Bernard C. Nalty : Stalemate: U.S. Marines from Bunker Hill to the Hook (Marines in the Korean War Commemorative Series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Stalemate: U.S. Marines from Bunker Hill to the Hook (Marines in the Korean War Commemorative Series):

It's 1952. Marines have been fighting in Korea for just over 2 years. The daring execution of the Inchon Landing, if not forgotten, might as well have been. For instead of conducting amphibious assaults and moving rapidly through North Korean forces, the Marines of the 1st Marine Division are fighting along a main line of resistance (MLR)-outpost warfare-static warfare that consisted of slugfests between artillery and mortars, but always the infantryman moving in small groups attacking and reattacking the same ground.
