From Brand: Burd Street Pr : "Stonewall" Jackson's "Foot Cavalry" before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised "Stonewall" Jackson's "Foot Cavalry":

In the early days of the war there were approximately 1,540 men in the 10 companies of the 13th Virginia Infantry Regiment. As the war progressed, attrition severely reduced the ranks, and only 63 survivors were present at the surrender at Appomattox. Company A, with an initial strength of 166, had remaining only 22 at Appomattox, one of whom was Private George Q. Peyton.

From the Publisher
The wartime diary of the experiences of George Peyton.
About the Author
After a distinguished career in the United States Air Force, which included a short tour in the White House, Colonel Walbrook D. Swank has devoted his time to writing about the Civil War. He is also the author/editor of several books including Old Abe's Jokes, Train Running for the Confederacy, and the award-winning Confederate Letters and Diaries, 1861-1865.
