

[Download] The Emerald Mile: The Epic Story of the Fastest Ride in History Through the Heart of the Grand Canyon

The Emerald Mile: The Epic Story of the Fastest Ride in History Through the Heart of the Grand Canyon

Kevin Fedarko

ePub | *DOC | audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF

 Download

 Read Online

#7371 in Books Scribner Book Company 2014-07-01 2014-07-01 Original language: English PDF # 1 8.37 x 1.20 x 5.50l, .86 #File Name: 1439159866448 pages Scribner Book Company | File size: 63.Mb

Kevin Fedarko : The Emerald Mile: The Epic Story of the Fastest Ride in History Through the Heart of the Grand Canyon before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Emerald Mile: The Epic Story of the Fastest Ride in History Through the Heart of the Grand Canyon:

3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. A perfect book
By DRKI'm in charge of river ops for a dam system in the Bureau of Reclamation. When a friend's father handed me this book, I expected to hate it but I also wanted to understand some of what went into the operations I could review from 1983. This turned out to be a beautiful, balanced, thoughtful book. There's no right or wrong answer. There aren't any faceless demons. Fedarko treats both sides of the engineering/environment divide with compassion and draws such strong character portraits that you find yourself rooting for both.
0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Glen Canyon Dam failure in 1983 is similar to the 2017 failure of the Oroville Dam spillway
By Kent PriceThis is a good story, but I really enjoyed the background material on the failure of the Glen Canyon Dam overflow tunnels. The big rains of 1983 in the West resulted in massive flooding in the Colorado River. The Glen Canyon Dam overflow tunnels had not been tested and failed, with the result of massive releases of water down the Colorado. The culprit was "cavitation" by the water flow the bypass tunnels which broke up the concrete lining causing failure. This is nicely covered in the book chapters, along with an appendix which explains the multimillion dollar fix after the floods. The fix was to install metal structures in the overflow tunnels to keep the water flow smooth and generate bubbles.
A similar failure occurred in 2017 at Oroville Dam in Northern California on the main spillway which was heavily damaged by the flood waters. The dam operators knew about the Glen Canyon fix, but chose in 2001 not to spend the $100 M for the upgrades. Now we (the taxpayers) are faced with $500 M to repair the spillway, and install the water-flow-smoothing devices.
Kevin Fedarko should write another book about the 2017 failure of the 710-ft high Oroville Dam spillway, the the evacuation of 200,000 people downstream. Every so often, Mother Nature show her teeth.
0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Fascinating Story Beautifully Written
By Top CatThis is a beautifully written book about much more than a record dory run through the Grand Canyon. Kevin Fedarko has a gift for conveying information in a way that is interesting and lyrical. I was there in the summer of 1983 and he brought me back to that time, exploring all angles of the situation--even telling in fascinating fashion what caused the big weather event that made a monster river rapid. I learned a tremendous amount about dams, and how perilous the situation was that summer. This is among the best books ever about those who explored and studied and harnessed and profited from and just plain loved the Colorado River. It puts you behind the oars like no other book I've ever read. It's a permanent addition to my natural history collection.

From one of Outside magazine's "Literary All-Stars" comes the thrilling true tale of the fastest boat ride ever, down the entire length of the Colorado River and through the Grand Canyon, during the legendary flood of 1983. In the spring of 1983, massive flooding along the length of the Colorado River confronted a team of engineers at the Glen Canyon Dam with an unprecedented emergency that may have resulted in the most catastrophic dam failure in history. In the midst of this crisis, the decision to launch a small wooden dory named "The Emerald Mile" at the head of the Grand Canyon, just fifteen miles downstream from the Glen Canyon Dam, seemed not just odd, but downright suicidal. The Emerald Mile, at one time slated to be destroyed, was rescued and brought back to life by Kenton Grua, the man at the oars, who intended to use this flood as a kind of hydraulic sling-shot. The goal was to nail the all-time record for the fastest boat ever propelled—by oar, by motor, or by the grace of God himself—down the entire length of the Colorado River from Lee's Ferry to Lake Mead. Did he survive? Just barely. Now, this remarkable, epic feat unfolds here, in The Emerald Mile.

"Kevin Fedarko's new brilliant work... is the story about wilderness and the American mind, albeit an American mind juiced on Class V adrenaline... Perhaps because we sympathize so strongly with the characters of The Emerald Mile--thanks in no small part to Fedarko's flowing prose--you'll feel yourself lurching along with them on wooden boats, in ocher-hued canyons, beneath cobalt skies, into the frenzied thrashings of the Colorado river as the very landscape of the West attempts to choke it." (Mountain magazine)"The book is at its heart an engrossing meditation on the eternal struggle between man and nature." (Pittsburg Post-Gazette)"Kevin Fedarko's remarkable The Emerald Mile re-creates an incredible voyage through the flood-swollen Grand Canyon in such heart-pounding detail that you need to pause every few pages to catch your breath... He writes so vividly that your favorite reading chair becomes a spray-soaked perch on a bucking boat hit hard by a river running high and fast." (Dallas Morning News)"Crafting a tale as graceful and powerful as the natural wonder of which he writes... the book goes beyond your typical river porn, offering a wide appeal to everyone from history buffs and the Popular Mechanics set to environmentalists and outdoor enthusiasts. In fact, it would not be overblown to say The Emerald Mile deserved a spot on the bookshelf alongside such enduring classics as Cadillac Desert, Desert Solitaire and Encounters with the Archdruid. It's that good... Fedarko will have you poised on the edge of your seat like a high-sider at in Lava Falls." (Durango Telegraph)"His poetic and descriptive writing should only brighten his accolades and helps his non-fiction book read like a fast-paced fiction adventure... It isn't necessary to be a history buff or whitewater expert to enjoy this story... With meticulous research, notes and epilogue, Fedarko tells a satisfying story that is quite an entertaining ride." (Deseret News)"The Emerald Mile is the rarest of creations—a magical convergence of words and paper, wood and water, rock and sky, human character and cosmic caprice. Can an adventure story be as beautiful as it is heart-stopping and exciting? This one is,

and Fedarko's book is as inspiring as a dory itself, flying down a wild river. I have no doubt it will become an instant classic, a timeless chronicle of what can still be legitimately called the American spirit." (Bob Shacochis author of Swimming in the Volcano and Easy in the Islands) "Fedarko's effortlessly engaging narrative... is a labor of passion from an adventurous journalist who still calls the Grand Canyon home." (Boulder Weekly) "Powerful and poetic passages put readers inside the adventurers' boats, even if they have only ever imagined the Grand Canyon or seen it in pictures... an epic-sized true-life adventure tale that appeals to both the heart and the head." (Kirkus) "Kevin Fedarko's magnificent book covers a lot of ground -- and water... So it is a great boon of Fedarko's book that he tells the story of the dam, and of the engineers and technicians who built it... with as much respect and homage as he gives to the dorymen." (Cleveland Plain-Dealer) "Grua's wild ride on the Colorado, how it mirrored his mercurial personality, is just on part of Fedarko's story; however, the river, which runs through seven states, and the canyon, rich in both geological and political history, prove to be the real protagonists." (Publisher's Weekly) "From the bottom of our planet's most awesome landscape, Kevin Fedarko has found and rescued a great American tall tale that just happens to be true. As a boatman, Fedarko knows this world intimately. As a writer, he'll make you understand it, savor it, and ultimately love it as you never have before. Here is an instant classic of adventure literature—a story shot through with bravura but also touched by the rarest kind of grandeur." (Hampton Sides editor-at-large at Outside magazine and author of Blood and Thunder and Ghost Soldiers)

About the Author Kevin Fedarko lives in northern New Mexico and works as a part-time river guide in Grand Canyon National Park. In addition to his travel narratives in Outside, where he worked as a senior editor, Fedarko's work has appeared in Esquire, National Geographic Adventure, and other publications, and has been anthologized in The Best American Travel Writing in 2004 and 2006. Fedarko was a staff writer at Time magazine from 1991 to 1997, where his work helped garner an Overseas Press Club Award for a story on the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin. Fedarko earned a Masters of Philosophy in Russian history at Oxford in 1990.