forget. It is a conflict that was ugly and useless for all .0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great read! Lost my first copy had to get ...By David SomersGreat read ! Lost my first copy had to get another one !2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. My BrotherBy S. D. JolliffMy brother was killed in action at Boulder City, the last battle fought by the Marines in the Korean War. Until I read this book's account of the battle, I had little knowledge of the circumstances around Marvin's death.

The Final Crucible details the 1st Marine Division's harrowing close-quarters battles during the final seven months of the Korean War, January to July 1953. The terrible five-day Battle of the Nevada Cities in March and the Marines' bloody stand at Boulder City on the last day of the shooting war are just two of the engagements detailed here. This volume follows The Outpost War: U.S. Marines in Korea, Vol. 1: 1952.

"The official history . . . does not capture the human drama; Lee Ballenger does this in spades. Not only does he write well and keep the purely military context in balance, but he also writes his history through the eyes of those who made it." "A vivid, well-written, and accurately documented accounting of an abundance of Marine guts and a shortfall of warrior glory in a 'forgotten war' that should never have been fought" Like its companion, The Outpost War, this is a nearly indispensable Korean War history. "Some of the best descriptive passages of small unit combat . . . A valuable contribution." From the Publisher Details how the Marines valiantly battled numerically superior Chinese forces and held the front Combines original historical research with oral accounts from the Marines who served Contains rare photos and original maps About the Author Lee Ballenger served in the 1st Marine Division's Reconnaissance Company and 1st Tank Battalion during the Korean War. His previous book is The Outpost War: U.S. Marines in Korea, Vol. 1: 1952 (Brassey's, Inc., 2000). He is a retired police officer living in southern California.
