

[DOWNLOAD] The French Navy in World War II

The French Navy in World War II

Rear Admiral Paul Auphan, Jacques Mordal audiobook / *ebooks / Download PDF / ePub / DOC

Download

Read Online

#702023 in Books NAVAL INSTITUTE 2016-06-15Original language:EnglishPDF # 1 9.10 x 1.30 x 5.90l, .0 #File Name: 159114566X456 pagesNAVAL INSTITUTE | File size: 72.Mb

Rear Admiral Paul Auphan, Jacques Mordal : The French Navy in World War II before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The French Navy in World War II:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Fine book, but as a new edition it could have been betterBy Horst PleinerIt`s a interesting book and it was such a book. You get an overview about the intentions, actions and Problems of the French Navy in the various phases of the second world war, in most of the cases looking into Details. There are in this edition some new facts and additional aspects to the Topic, but looking at the long time since the first Edition of this book and the volume of the historical Research in this period you would have expected more new insights and facts. But all in all the book is a good Information in General about the fate and fame of the French Navy in a really difficult period.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. This is an excellent resource both for a service record of the French ...By Timothy WishamThis is an excellent resource both for a service record of the French Navy during WW2 but also serves as a great explanation as to why the fleet largely remained loyal to Vichy France. I highly recommend it.2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. The information is better collected here than in subsequent volumesBy Pastor Keith A. HunsingerThe information is better collected here than in subsequent volumes. My only concern is the obvious desire of the authors to justify their accounts during the war. It gets in the way of telling their version of the story. Still in all, a very good account of the subject material.

Prior to this book's original publication in 1959 little had been done to dispel confusion regarding what really happened to the French Navy during World War II. Few people realized the tragic situation of a country forced to capitulate to a traditional enemy. After this humiliating experience, the Navy, in its attempts to preserve France's foreign possessions, and to supply the mother country, found itself torn between the conflicting interests of involved internal and international politics. Forced to scuttle part of the fleet at Toulon, the remainder found themselves viewed with wary suspicion by both the Germans and the Allies. That the French Navy was able to survive at all is a minor miracle. That it so well preserved its unanimity as to return to the fight and participate in the final victory is in itself a tribute to the moral, discipline, and traditions that date back to the crusades. The French Navy in World War II is now available in paperback.

“This is a recent reprint of this book originally written in 1959 when most of these events were still fresh in the authors' and contributors' minds, and many of the schisms of the war were still evident. The book could be accused of some bias in seeking to explain the events and decisions made by the leaders of Vichy, but overall, it gives a very complete picture of the French Navy activities. Its 385 pages of text provide a lot of information about what, for many of us, is a very little known aspect of World War II.”?StarshellLanguage NotesText: English, French (translation)About the AuthorRear Admiral Paul Auphan (1894–1982) served in World War I and World War II. After serving as Minister of the French Navy, he resigned on 15 November 1942. He published numerous books on naval and political history.Jaques Mordal (1910-1980) was a French naval historian. He authored twenty books on World War II, the most important of which relate the stories of the conspicuous events in the history of the French Navy: the Norwegian campaign; the battles of Dunkirk, Dakar, and Casablanca; and the war in Indochina.